Passage 2

A city without cars would be very strange, right? But Venice is such a city.

Venice is in the northeast of Italy. It wasn't built on land, like Beijing or Shanghai, but on more than 110 islands. Sea water is everywhere around the city.

Even so, travel isn't difficult. The waterways have always been the best way to get around. There are about 150 waterways and more than 400 bridges that can guide you wherever you want to go. People in Venice move from place to place by boat.

Water makes the city special, but it is also a big problem. Sometimes tourists will have such strange experiences. When they walk across the Rialto Bridge, there's nothing special. But when they come back to the bridge an hour later, it's underwater and everyone is wearing rain boots.

Once, people used too much underground water. This made the city get lower little by little. Now the city has gone down by 23 centimeters. Another problem is the rising seawater. The temperature has risen over the years, which makes the glaciers (冰川) of the Arctic Ocean melt. Every year, high water hits the city in autumn and winter. When a lot of water comes, more than half of the city is underwater.

Scientists are trying different ways to stop the city from getting even lower. The Italian government has asked some of Italy's biggest companies to build the MOSE project, which is planned to be built under the seawater to stop the rising water. Anyway, this project is helping to solve the problem.

Passage 3

Recently, a study published in BMC Medicine found that sitting in front of the TV for a long time was a risk to people's health.

After scientists studied data from 370,000 people, covering 12 years, they found about 9,000 developed heart disease. They found people with genes of heart problems were more likely to develop heart disease. However, they found that people without such genes watching more than 4 hours of TV every day were also at the greatest risk of developing heart disease. People spending 2 to 3 hours a day watching TV had a 6% lower risk. And those who watched TV for less than an hour had a 16% lower risk. The scientists of the research team found cutting TV watching time to less than an hour a day could prevent 10% of heart disease.

In life, people who want "one more episode (剧集)" might be the group at a higher risk, for they are easy to spend more time watching TV. If they have more snacks while watching TV, it might add the risk of putting their hearts in danger. So, if people want to watch TV longer, standing up and moving the body, or hanging out will work. But restricting their time on TV could be a more useful way to help them avoid possible heart problems in the future.

27. Where was the study published?

28. According to the passage, how long did the research cover

29. What can people do to prevent 10% of heart disease according to the study?

30. What advice does the author give to people who want to watch TV longer?

31. Translate the sentence "it might add the risk of putting their hearts in danger." into Chinese.

Passage 4

The Greens lived in San Francisco. As their children grew up, their house seemed too small to live in. They cleared out a lot of things from their bedrooms. They decided that each sold five things which they no longer used. They would sell them in the yard and give the money to a children's home.

It was a sunny morning and the Greens were having a yard sale.

Alex and Claire were sad because they had to give up certain things. Claire thought her toys were priceless because they brought her lots of sweet moments, so she priced them very high. Because of the high prices, she didn't sell anything until a little girl named Eliza came. She asked, "Is the toy bear for sale?"

"Yes," Claire said, "but it's expensive—twenty dollars."

"I only have two dollars," the girl said sadly.

Claire felt a little guilty. "Well, sometimes we cut prices," she said.

"Really? Then I will wait," Eliza said happily. An hour later, she asked, "Is the bear on sale now?" There was hope in her eyes.

Claire suddenly felt sorry for what she did. After all, the toy bear wasn't worth twenty dollars. And it would bring joy to Eliza.

"It's two dollars now," Claire said.

"Thank you!" Eliza said and danced around Claire.
